Description

The main Catholic place of worship in Siena. The cathedral was built in the Italian Romanesque-Gothic style and is one of the most significant churches built in this style in Italy. Inside there are masterpieces of art: the pulpit by Nicola Pisano of the thirteenth century, while in the altar you can admire the sculptures of Michelangelo and the Piccolomini library built in 1492 by Pope Pius II to preserve the rich book heritage. The cathedral also preserves the marble floor divided into 56 panels and celebrated by Vasari as an extraordinary decorative project.
